Abstract

Since Indus valley civilisation to present era of modern world in India, women have been an important element, part and organ of the family system. Their role in family has been so important and unavoidable and unpreventable in determining all types of family issues. Without women in family, its nature, type and progress would not be elegant and beautiful in terms of organising, integrating and structuring family's needs and necessities .Regarding sweeping, washing, cleaning, preserving, protecting and make progressing family, house and other items in residential places, women have been playing much vital role. More than male women in all family settings have vital, sincere and serious responsibility in terms of rearing children, begetting children, arranging all facilities to be family members and fetching income for meet unforeseen expenditures. Though male are useless, spendthrift and lavish in India's family system toward protecting family system, it's neatly and perfectly is being protected by women toward aching progress, stability and development in family structure. Families would be good, super, neat, elegant, perfect and peaceful in terms of income, child rearing, family running, revenue making, and responsibility imbibing and moulding family structure. From all types of world's civilisation women's role had been played vital role in terms of defeating enemy ,conquer territory ,occupying provinces, ruling countries and making polices ,without their role men's mind would not function in proper way toward making policy and initiating other welfare privileges for the people's progress and development. World system has been witnessed and proved that all types of incidents, discoveries, inventions and developments are happened in the field of administration, economic, agriculture, health, Medicines, telecommunication and science and technology along with women's cooperation and collaboration for wholesome development. Their roles have been epicentre and central theme of social, political, economical and political progress in useful and fruitful ways. Either family progressing or stuning at backward is defends upon the nature of women's role and male's role toward thinking ,determining and deciding about family's needs in positive aspects and ways .Though family is at edge of the deteriorating conditions it would be protected and stopped by the women's thoughtful and creative deciding and thinking ,in general world criticising male people could be impossible one at all level of family development and strengthening because they are working and putting enormous role in initial times to structure family ,strengthen children's life and careers ,after that they are working ceaselessly in all fields to keep happy family members with all welfare facilities .According to their hard work done regularly nature of earning and working may be varied and found laborious and unwillingness ,at this time women's role is important to organise ,strengthen ,develop and nurture family member's life along with family development. The habits of saving, earning, working hardly and thinking about family developments of the male people and female people constantly go together without any split and crevice,the hard working nature of the male people in poor family makes them to become disinterested in ability to work additionally as they worked at initial days and years for protect family pulls women's into family system to strengthen ,structure and design their family needs.

Profile

Since women are gifted and created by the god to this wonderful world ,family's needs, necessities ,directions ,plans ,designs ,progress ,peace and developments are happening huge and lot since Indusvally civilisation to present world system. For example, soil needs always water's help for function smoothly, flower needs always air's touch to blossom regularly, and natural needs always sun's torch and rays for grow, produce vegetables and fruits similarly and proportionally like these examples family needs both male and female to carry out its inherent and natural work for sustain its nature of originations in world civil societies. In all civil societies though lot people are there but women have been as one of the attractive, mesmerising, longing, beautified and aesthetic creature with an intentions and aim to run family and satisfy male people's biological, physiological and physiological desire .These patterns are being fundamental of the India's civil society, on other hand world social forum for do all types of family work in effective and efficient ways without failure and frustration.

Integrating and strengthening family system

In real life of human beings responsibility and strengthening family system are the basic inbuilt one of both male and female people. Toward directing, conducting, regulating ,synchronising, synergising and integrating family's needs and necessities are the most popular and inherent inclinations of the female people to achieve success and victory in all aspects of polity, society and economical. Naturally, femal's types are associated with peacemaking, establishing prosperity, integrating family members, bringing revenue and income to strengthen family's image as an equal to other family system in Indian culture. Since birth of world system, female's dignity, name, respects, rights, privileges' and mannerism are protected very well and nice due to their marvellous achievements and god's creation, whose role in Indian society or universally have been notable ,remarkable and praiseworthy one with an interest make success, victory ,history, inventions and discoveries for social, political and economical developments. From works from zero to z is done by women in all families while male are going to work and subsistence because time has shifted their life in steady and constant ways to run family as equal to male people's talent and energy, without their role family will seems to be handicapped and unbeautiful. Images of both male and female constitute the word and name of family, its reputations; glory, success, prestige and privileges are protected very well. Very often female are known and lauded in dignified ways more than male people owing to their renowned and scarified social and family work that they do for whole society development since their birth.

Women's duty in Society

Women are as important as men in any society. They stay in the house and keep it in good order. They cook food for the family. After marriage, they give birth to children. They provide every comfort to their husbands and children. Quite a few women stay outside the house to teach or work in government and private offices, hospitals, business centers, banks, and public places. In the villages, they work side by side with men in the fields and look after animals at home. In this way, they contribute to social and national progress.

The work and functions of women are greatly important for the family. Properly educated and trained women can be of immense help to their husbands and working members of the family. They can teach, train and bring up their children on the right lines. They can advise their husbands and other members of the family in important property, business, and professional matters. Their role, then, in the family becomes paramount (supremely) important.

We need educated and well-trained women in our villages and small towns. Female teachers, doctors, social workers, government officers, and teachers are needed everywhere. Many of our schools and colleges for girls are without enough female teachers. The clinics and hospitals in the villages and towns require female doctors, nurses, and paramedics (doctors' helpers) in most places. Social workers for the guidance of women and children in our village and town streets, houses, markets, and public places like parks, railway and bus stations, and health centers are urgently needed. These trained social workers can advise women and children about what they can and should do for a better life. They can tell them about safe and cheap travel from one place to another. They can discuss ways of keeping healthy and fit.

In the bigger cities, we need educated and trained women to work in schools, colleges and universities, hospitals, offices, firms and companies, airports and seaports, business centers, factories, TV stations, and newspaper offices in different capacities. The fields of engineering, aviation (flying and airplane operation), agriculture, and industry are open to women now. They can work in the home and work outside to earn money and to keep active in professions of their liking. There are professions like medicine and teaching where women can work better than or equally well with men. Female schoolteachers, doctors, nurses, composers, artists, designers, and shop assistants are in great demand. It all shows the importance and usefulness of women in our society and other societies as well.

For centuries men considered women the less intelligent of the sexes. This terribly wrong perception caused immense loss to their self-dignity. But, at present, women have been playing major roles in politics, economy, household, society, and nation-building. The timid female of the past has been replaced by a youthful, fashion-conscious, and smart girl. Women are jostling shoulders with men and competing with them in engineering, sciences, space research, medicine, and business. This marked change in their status reflects the fact that their emancipation is almost complete.

Only, a few decades ago, the condition of the woman was increasingly poor. Her position was secluded and she was assigned a lower status in society. She was virtually condemned to lead her life as a beast of burden. For a very long time, she was unable to raise her status from a mere household drudge. She was forced to run the house and do all its furnishing, cleaning, cooking, sewing, sweeping, dusting, washing, and so on. Besides this, she had to rear her children and serve her husband. She was no better than a slave. She had to be respectful and submissive before men. They were denied all sorts of higher education and were strictly confined to the four walls of the house. She was always treated in a brutal manner and was generally regarded as the silly, sentimental and dull creature. It was a common belief that women were created only to please men.

The women of the rural areas have always played an extremely active role in the economic field. They are no longer restricted to the fields only. They are working effectively in the fields of poultry breeding, sewing, embroidery, midwifery, nursing, preserving vegetables and fruit, etc. The radio and television have made them fully aware of their rights. This development has changed the very face of the countryside regarding the status and dignity of women. "Women should develop their aptitudes in accordance with their own nature without imitating the males. Their part in the progress of civilization is higher than that of men." Alex Carrel Women constitutes nearly half the population of Pakistan. The country where women are kept in ignorance is destined to be doomed. The history of the developed countries affords increasing evidence that the progress of a country has always synchronized with the liberation and education of women.

Conclusion

In general phrase whole social system, structure, needs, necessities and business are being preserved and development more meticulously by women people since they born on soil as a daughter, sister and siblings. Always value, respects, dignity, fundamental rights and mannerism of them are being protected by all male people in all the social, economical and political places and institutions. Frequently and naturally women are respected and treated by all male people as equal to god because they are bearing ,tolerating, digesting, supporting and shouldering more burden and weight with an interest to save, protect, nurture, develop and strengthen family's value .Though male and female are having responsibility, sincerity, accountability and duty ,frequently and naturally women are worrying and bothering lot seriously and sincerely to save family's value ,dignity and respects by dedicating and inserting hard work along with male people's shoulders.

In recent years women's role and name in the family development are highlighted and elevated more famously when their husbands are found inebriated, intoxicated and liquored because liquor habits are increased lot among the male people after marriage and before marriage thereby women are getting multiple problem but they could not do anything to change male's liquor habits until they reform themselves for family welfare. oday the world has undergone a sea change. The new economic affairs have impelled women to come out of their homes and join various professions in order to supplement the income of their men folk. But women, by nature, are tender, compassionate, and sympathetic.

They can, therefore, become good teachers, nurses, physicians, social workers, journalists, wardens of orphanages, and homes for old and poor persons. This is, however, not to say that they cannot succeed in other professions. Some people object to nursing as something anti-Islamic. They are totally mistaken, for the pages of history give a vivid' account of the brave Muslim women who helped the wounded Muslim warriors in the battlefields. The dramatic spread of education has enormously contributed to the positive approach of men towards women's careers. The medical field is regarded highly noble profession and lady doctors, as well as nurses, are respectable figures all over the country. To sum up, today's woman has decisively rejected the sentimental myth of "frailty which kept depicting her as a man's plaything and a purchasable commodity. The woman is playing a crucially important role in the making of a nation. The man has also revised his attitude towards women. Ladies First is the order of the day and the man calls it courtesy to conceal' his defeat at the hands of a modern woman. Today's women are more hardworking and sincere in all walks of life and are more productive than their male counterparts.
